THE CHILD IN HIS FAMILY

edited by James Anthony, Washington University School of Medicine and Cyrille Koupernik, Paris.

The first volume in an annual series that will deal with the psychology and psychopathology of childhood development. Contributors are specialists from many disciplines, schools of thought, and countries. Reflects the present stage of growth in the field, and the variations in family life throughout the world. (Volume 1, The International Yearbook for Child Psychiatry and Allied Disciplines.)

October 1970 492 pages 120s.

SCHOLARS IN CONTEXT: THE EFFECTS OF ENVIRONMENTS ON LEARNING

edited by W. J. Campbell, Professor of Educational Psychology, University of Queensland, Australia.

In this book an earnest attempt is made to place school learning within its numerous contexts. The book is divided into six parts (the cultural context, the community context, the home context, the peer-group context, the institutional context, and the classroom context), and in each part a broad survey chapter which raises significant issues is followed by research chapters in which a selection of the issues is examined empirically. The six survey chapters form an important unit of their own and students will find in them new and exciting insights; the research chapters are important shafts sent down to tap almost unexplored fields in education. The book is unique in being concerned with the social psychology of learning and teaching.

due October 1970 430 pages 113s.
